Human activity through the centuries has left its imprint on Ancient Woodland.

As well as old coppice stools, rides and glades, you may find the remains of sawpits, boundary banks or ditches, and holloways – sunken roads formed by years of use by people, cattle and carts.

Associated with Wycombe's famous furniture industry, Bodgers were the skilled craftsmen who worked and often lived in the local woods, using pole lathes and other in-situ tools to create the spindles, stretchers and legs for chairs such as the famous Windsor Chair.
