“Chiltern Rangers work insight day was an absolutely fabulous day filled with laughter and joy. Spending time with our friends whilst helping the environment, made this day thoroughly enjoyable.

During the course of the day we did many things, but we were first introduced to our team leaders who were so kind and helpful. Shortly after, we were taught how to use pliers and saws to cut down the shrub at Chiltern Hills.

It was humbling to know that we were helping a rare type of butterfly survive. Through cutting the shrub we were aiding the food chain at Chiltern hills to continue to flourish, as well as helping this wonderful ecosystem to prosper. We all learnt about the rangers and how their amazing work helps the Chiltern’s thrive with wildlife.

After about two hours of hard work we were asked to talk to a career’s specialist. This was someone who was specialised in the field that we were looking to go into. I chose Mr Gill, someone who was very knowledgeable in the area of bioinformatics. It was amazing to find out more about science and the field that I wished to work in. I learnt a great deal about bioinformatics and how it impacts all of our day to day lives.

After this very insightful talk with our career specialists, we set back to do two more hours of hard work. Even though, we had worked for about four hours; none of us were tired – in fact we were very motivated to help out with the environment. Working with our friends made the experience even more remarkable!

Overall, the day was fantastic and it was filled with such insightful talks. All of us had made some absolutely amazing memories; working with our friends, helping out with the environment and getting an excellent understanding into the different fields that we all aspire to work in. “
